

Flight One's Online Learning Centre

Terms & Conditions

All content available through the Online Learning Centre remains the Intellectual Property of Flight One unless otherwise available via open-source. As such, all courseware remains the property Flight One and is available at its discretion.

Students enrolled in a course program may access their courseware when:

- they have paid for their enrolment and are up to date with their general account
- they remain an student of Flight One
- they have not yet passed a flight test for their relevant section of study
- they have not exhausted a reasonable duration of enrolment

No pro-rata refunds apply to students who elect to leave Flight One part way through their training. A pro-rata refund may only be given if a student withdraws from a course before conducting their second flight training event due to exceptional circumstances which will be duly considered by Flight One's management team.

We expect that a student will have studied for their lesson and completed the Online Learning prior to presenting themselves for a flight. If a student does not demonstrate that they have grasped the key learning principles of a lesson, or at least attempted to do so by way of review of the Online Learning content, two options apply:

- 1) The student may decide to take the time to personally review the material during the time allotted to flying a lesson. If this is the case, Flight One reserves the right to charge a Lesson Cancellation Fee.
- 2) A student may elect to convert his/her flying time to a formal briefing period. If this is the case, standard briefing rates apply and are charged in addition to and not substitution for their Online Learning package fee.

The cost of investment for each learning package can be accessed in-store, and may vary from time to time in line with content development.
